Royal Greenwich residents get in festive mood - p12&13

Every penny accounted for

AUDITORS checking the books have given the royal borough a clean bill of health for the way it managed its money and its business during the last financial year.

Auditors Grant Thornton said the council had "successfully delivered £56 million in cost savings over the last two years, primarily achieved through back office restructuring and improved efficiency in the delivery of services. This has left the council in a strong financial position which should help safeguard the delivery of public services in the coming years."

The auditors looked at how the council had prioritised its resources to take account of the tighter economy, reduced costs, and improved productivity and efficiency. They said there were "no significant issues to report."

Overall, they said they were satisfied that "in all significant respects the council put in place proper arrangements to secure economy, efficiency and effectiveness in its use of resources for the year ending 31 March 2013."

They added that there were "robust arrangements to secure

Why I'm put off High Street

HAVING recently passed down Woolwich High Street, I was dismayed to find myself being approached at several points by charity collectors, strategically placed along the street to catch shoppers at multiple points along their route to and from the station. Towards the end of the street I was also confronted by the sight of a man waving a Bible in the air and shouting loudly at passers-by about them being 'sinners' and needing to 'seek salvation', in a manner that made me feel somewhat uneasy and intimidated. As a local resident who is justifiably proud of our borough and its wealth of ethnic and religious diversity, I was troubled to see shoppers desperately trying to avoid these people and hurrying away to get away from the High Street. In an area where shopping choices are limited and local shops are struggling, surely we should be doing everything we can to encourage residents to spend more time and money in our local communities, not finding ways to drive them away?

Mr Cavendish, Woolwich

● A spokesman for the council said: "The Royal Borough of Greenwich will always act to ensure that local people using the high street feel welcome and safe in and around our town centres and we're sorry to hear that you felt otherwise on your recent trip. Although the council does not have any legal powers over charities that are collecting funds in the borough, we are working with the Public Fundraising Regulatory Association (PRFA) to control the numbers on the streets. The PRFA regulate charity collectors and ensure that all street fundraising is monitored and controlled so that multiple charities are not sited in any one single area. The council's agreement with the PRFA allows charities to operate in parts of Powis Street up to three times a week. The council does not have any powers to approach individuals that are preaching in the town centre. However both the community wardens and police can do so, if the individual is causing a nuisance. Woolwich Town Centre is a vibrant place over the festive season and no doubt residents will be looking forward to the Woolwich Winter Warmer this Saturday."

Enforce cycle ban

I AGREE with Tonia Evans' comments on cyclists in the Greenwich foot tunnel as I have encountered the same thing. I confronted a cyclist in that tunnel, but all I got was abuse. I think it's time that everyone who objects to this type of behaviour spoke up. I for one am sick of cyclists riding at considerable speed where they should not be riding in the first place. I will never move aside for them and step into the road, which is what they expect us to do, because getting hit by a car or other motor vehicle is likely to be fatal. Ever increasing road traffic means roads have become dangerous for cyclists, but this is no excuse for them to make pavements and footpaths dangerous for pedestrians. It is about time that the laws were enforced.

Alan Wilton Humber Road SE3

● A spokesman for the council said: "We're sorry to hear that you had a difficult experience with a cyclist in the Greenwich foot tunnel. The council would never condone thoughtless or dangerous cycling – regardless of whether it is on the road, the foot tunnels or in our great open spaces. The council has an extensive programme of cycle education and training and we always stress that cyclists should cycle safely and considerately, a point covered in our cycle strategy that is out to consultation. To comment, visit www.royalgreenwich.gov.uk/consultations"

Capital's most popular library

by Dick Townsend-Smith

WOOLWICH Library is now the pride of the borough after becoming the most popular library in London, and the fourth most used in the UK.

The annual libraries survey carried out by the Chartered Institute of Public Finance and Accountancy (CIPFA) found that almost 900,000 people are visiting Woolwich's library a year.

Only libraries in Norwich, Brighton and Newcastle receive more visitors.

The library, in the Woolwich Centre in Wellington Street, is far more than just a lender of books and DVDs.

People go there throughout the day to check out new jobs on computer screens, have lessons in IT, hear a talk, join a reading group, use free wi-fi, or view special exhibitions.

There are also regular health screenings.

OPEN BOOK: library users enjoy a book in the children's corner

The success of Woolwich is against a backdrop of London libraries having nearly four per cent less money being spent on them than previously.

CIPFA's chief executive Rob Whiteman said: "Local authorities across the UK have worked hard over the past few years to identify savings and reduce their spending but now also seem to be looking at new ways of keeping their libraries open to the public."

The borough invests heavily in its libraries. While library services in other parts of the country have been shrinking, Royal Greenwich has been moving in the opposite direction.

Cllr Peter Kotz, the royal borough's cabinet member for the cultural and creative industries, said: "Our libraries are an important hub for the local community, offering much more than books and DVDs."

"They are a vital source of support for local people and their courses will help people to further their studies or discover a new leisure activity."

New road workforce could steer young unemployed to jobs

A NEW workforce looks set to be created by the council to give unemployed young people training and jobs repairing the borough's minor roads and pavements.

The council's cabinet gave the scheme the thumbs-up at their meeting last Wednesday (December 11).

The royal borough's highways maintenance contract is up for renewal, which provides the opportunity to tailor any new contract to include a local labour scheme.

The priority would be to recruit young people without jobs, and the cabinet has agreed to provide funding to launch the scheme. Up to 100 B roads in greatest need of resurfacing would figure in the plan. They are roads which are not covered by Transport for London's maintenance programme.

The new scheme would give a boost to other projects already running as part of the council's commitment to improving local lives and communities through the creation of thousands of new jobs, housing and transport links.

Its jobs and training agency GLLaB has helped 16,000 local people find training or employment by providing a link between residents and employers.

The council has also set up several specialist skills centres for people to be trained in sectors where jobs are available.

The royal borough is also working hard to promote and support local growth industries, attracting more investment and creating a stronger local economy.

One example is the tourism and hospitality industry, which is seeing significant expansion locally with new hotels, restaurants and leisure facilities opening in the borough, bringing in more spending and new jobs.

The local labour scheme for road repairs will go before the full council at its next meeting tomorrow (Wednesday).

Economy, efficiency and effectiveness

financial resilience ... supported by a strong record of financial management and financial performance."

The auditors' value for money review identified that only minor improvements were needed. An action plan was drawn up to tackle them, and was approved by the council at the end of July.

The report is due to be discussed by the full council tomorrow (Wednesday, December 18). Council tax in the borough has been frozen for the 7th year in a row and 12 out of the last 17

Cllr Chris Roberts, leader of the royal borough, told GT: "This was another tough year of financial challenges and we endeavoured to make economies that were as fair as possible to everyone. I'm delighted the auditors have endorsed our actions."

TV winners

SWITCHED ON: the Mayor presents a 51" TV to Penny Jones, to replace the faulty one in the visitor lounge

PATIENTS and visitors to the Greenwich and Bexley Community Hospice will be glued to the box this Christmas after getting a brand new flat screen for the lounge.

The new 51 inch TV was presented to the hospice on Bostall Hill by Greenwich Mayor Angela Cornforth last week.

The TV is one of 13 which were confiscated from fraudsters by the royal borough's anti fraud team under the Proceeds of Crime Act after an investigation by the police and UK Border Agency. They are now heading to far worthier owners and are being donated to organisations that support vulnerable people in the borough. The hospice was the first to receive a TV last Thursday.

Penny Jones, hospice director of care services, said: "It could not have come at a more opportune moment as our current television in our visitor's room is broken; this wonderful gift will give great pleasure to patients, their relatives and visitors."

The Mayor said: "I'm delighted to present this television to the Greenwich and Bexley Community Hospice, which gives quality care and support to people who have life threatening conditions. This is the first of 13 TVs that have been seized from fraudsters. The rest will be used by organisations for adults with learning disabilities."

Open door to more homes

New lettings scheme offers support for property owners

by Dick Townsend-Smith

PROPERTY owners are getting help to make their empty houses and flats available under a new scheme to ease the housing shortage.

The scheme has been launched to support local property owners so they can offer their properties to the council for rent or leasing.

The council-backed scheme is designed to ease the shortage of homes available locally.

And property owners are being offered up to £1,000 as an incentive to take part.

Two options are available, both supported by the royal borough. Private owners can opt to lease their property to the council for up to five years at an agreed rent, with the council taking on full management role. This includes drawing up the lease, guaranteed rent paid monthly in advance, finding suitable tenants, carrying out minor repairs and maintenance, and regular property inspections.

The council will also offer grants and loans to bring properties up to higher standards, ensure vacant possession at the end of the lease, and arrange for it to be renewed if the owner wishes.

The second option is a free service from the council to support property owners who want to manage their own lettings privately. It includes providing carefully-vetted tenants, a bond for claims against losses for damage or rent arrears, grants and loans to bring the property up to higher standards, free photographic inventories, property check and tenancy agreements, and free advice and training. The council will also fast-track housing benefit claims for properties in the borough to ensure landlords receive prompt payment.

Cllr Steve Offord, the council's cabinet member for housing, said: "Both these options are a win-win outcome for everyone involved. We can help owners of empty properties get an income, and also take away a lot of the pain of the leasing and letting process. It also means we can ensure more people can have a roof over their heads."

Mandela condolence books

CONDOLENCE books which were available to the public to sign in memory of Nelson Mandela, are to be taken to the South African High Commission in Trafalgar Square. Two books were opened to local residents at Woolwich Town Hall and at the Eltham Centre on December 6 following his death on December 5. And flags at the town hall were flown at half mast in honour of the South African who was given the Freedom of the Borough in 1983.

In 1988 a street in Kidbrooke was named Nelson Mandela Way and his Freedom of the Borough was reaffirmed in March last year - all to demonstrate the high esteem in which he was held by the council and people of Greenwich. In 1993 Mr Mandela met Neville and Doreen Lawrence after their son Stephen was murdered in Eltham. Last week Mrs Lawrence, now Baroness Lawrence of Clarendon, issued her own tribute saying: "He was a man of justice and peace, who gave so much without any thought for himself. I will always appreciate the support he gave my family and me back in 1993 after Stephen's murder. His words made a big difference and led to the first arrest of some of the perpetrators. Mr Mandela understood what it meant to lose someone because of racism. I will always remember a calm natured man who cared so much for others and saw the good in everyone. Rest in peace Mr Mandela with love."

Festive waste and recycling dates

WASTE, recycling and clinical collection dates have been revised for the Christmas and new year period.

You can see the full list of collection dates on page 23 of this issue of Greenwich Time. Alternatively you can find the list and further information at www.royalgreenwich.gov.uk/recycling

The royal borough will also recycle your real Christmas tree as part of your weekly collection - remove all decorations and the pot and place your tree at the front of your property, but not in your bin. Residents living in flats should leave their real trees by the bin store. Residents are also asked to recycle as much as possible over the holiday period. Christmas cards, paper, glass bottles and jars, plastic bottles, cans and cardboard boxes can all be placed in your blue top bin. Leftover food waste can be placed in your green top bin. Don't forget to order clear recycling and cornstarch bags for food waste in plenty of time to guarantee delivery before Christmas. If you are not currently recycling then please telephone the council's Contact Centre on 020 8921 4661 to order your blue-top bin.

Playground plan for disabled children

FIVE playgrounds in the borough are set to be equipped with new equipment designed specially for children with moderate or severe disabilities.

It's all part of the royal borough's Playground to Podium Olympics legacy scheme designed to encourage people of all ages and abilities to take part in sport and live a more healthy lifestyle.

Royal borough cabinet members agreed a plan for the equipment to be supplied and fitted by a specialist manufacturer at a cost of £115,000, at a meeting last Wednesday. Its design means disabled children with special needs will be able to play alongside their able-bodied friends. The decision follows talks with a specialist children's physiotherapist and Greenwich Parent Voice, a local group of parents and carers who have children with disabilities.

Although current play equipment meets national design standards, feedback shows it is not what parents and children with moderate to severe disabilities want.

The five sites earmarked for the new play equipment are Chiswell Square, Charlton Park, Eltham Park, Hornfair Park and Slade Playground. The installation work will take three months, and the play equipment will be available in the Spring. Other borough playgrounds will also be considered for similar equipment.

Give your view on royal borough's cycling strategy

THE Royal Borough of Greenwich has set out a detailed vision for cycling in the borough right up to 2026. It's about building new cycle routes, encouraging more people to cycle and making it safer for people to do. The council wants your views on the strategy before it's finalised – visit www.royalgreenwich.gov.uk/haveyoursay

Celebrate safely

Campaign launched to protect festive revellers

by Dick Townsend-Smith

THE POLICE and the council are working together to help keep the festive season as safe and trouble-free as possible as part of a joint Christmas campaign.

Police officers are delivering letters to pub landlords reminding them of their responsibilities and asking them to consider using security staff during busy weekends.

Landlords and licensees will receive a personal visit from their local policing teams to remind them not to serve people who are already intoxicated. And special constables will be out in force helping Safer Neighbourhoods officers to visit all licensed premises in the run-up to Christmas.

One of the letters was delivered in person to the Ashburnham Arms in Ashburnham Grove, Greenwich, by the borough's police chief, Commander Richard Wood, and Cllr Maureen O'Mara, the council's cabinet member for community safety and enforcement.

Cmdr Wood said: "Many licensed premises operate over the festive season with no concerns to the police. We expect all licensees to take responsibility for the impact licensed venues have on the local community so that everyone can have a safe and enjoyable time."

And Cllr O'Mara added: "We want people to have an enjoyable time at Christmas, but we want them to be safe as well. We welcome the opportunity to work with the police to encourage people to enjoy themselves, but in a way that is responsible and considerate to other people."

FESTIVE MESSAGE: Cllr Maureen O'Mara, licensee Dennis Ryan and Cmdr Richard Wood

Ashburnham Arms licensee Dennis Ryan said: "I encourage my customers to be sensible throughout the year, but that is particularly important at this time of the year because many more people want to get together and celebrate with a drink."

The local campaign supports a pan-London operation by the Met Police called Operation Fuse.

Officers are also handing out crime prevention tips to party goers on their way to pubs and bars and have issued the following safety tips:

- Plan your journey home - visit www.tfl.gov.uk or text HOME to 60835 or download the CABWISE app
- Avoid walking alone at night.
- Keep your bags zipped or locked, and valuables out of sight.
- Don't accept drinks from anyone you don't know or trust completely and never share your drinks with strangers.
- Register your phone on the Immobilise database to help protect them from thieves.

ROYAL BOROUGH OF GREENWICH ROAD TRAFFIC REGULATION ACT 1984 – SECTION 23 BOSTALL HILL

THE streets of Woolwich were full of fun and plenty of festive cheer on Saturday December 7 when the Woolwich Winter Warmer Christmas Countdown hit town.

A packed town centre was treated to street entertainers, food stalls, ice sculptures and live music as well as fabulous fireworks as part of the biggest event in this year's Winter Warmer series.

Visitors searching for a cracking Christmas experience met real reindeers and there was plenty of festive gift ideas at a Christmas craft market.

Those watching the live stage were treated to performances from the Royal Artillery Band and the Air Cadets.

One highlight of the event was an amazing lantern procession with 250 children, who had made their own lanterns, and a spectacular fireworks finale sent everyone home happy.

Christmas Countdown sponsors included Sainsbury's, McDonald's, Sky and Riney.

There's a further day of free festive fun in the square for the final winter warmer event on Saturday December 21 from 11am to 5pm.

'Yellow men' steer residents away from A&E

A FAMILY of seven-foot tall 'Yellow Men' are popping up around Greenwich throughout December and January as part of the 'Not Always A&E' campaign.

Launched by NHS Greenwich's Clinical Commissioning Group (CCG), the campaign aims to inform people about the alternatives to visiting A&E this winter in a situation that is not an emergency.

Winter is always a busy time for the health service and this can lead to long waiting times in A&E departments. However, there are plenty of alternative options for people with conditions that aren't life-threatening.

The campaign highlights the alternative places people can get the expert advice and treatment they need including: self-care at home, pharmacies, your GP, Urgent Care Centre at Queen Elizabeth Hospital, and walk-in centres.

The Yellow Men statues supporting the Not Always A&E campaign will appear on buses and billboards throughout the royal borough, as well as online and on social media.

The campaign will also be visiting Woolwich's General Gordon Square in January 2014.

During the colder months it is also important that people look after themselves at home.

It is important to stay warm and comfortable and ensure your general health is kept in check by having regular hot drinks and meals whilst also keeping hydrated say health advisers.

Residents are advised to stock up a medicine cabinet at home to help with minor maladies.

Useful items include: Paracetamol, aspirin (not for under 16 years), anti-diarrhoea medicine, rehydration mixture, indigestion mixture, plasters and a thermometer.

● Full details of the campaign and information on the best service for each ailment are available on the interactive website www.notalwaysaande.co.uk

Hi ho! Panto horses to race into town

by Dick Townsend-Smith

UP TO 30 pantomime horses, along with camels, reindeer and other beasts, will be cantering through the streets of Greenwich town centre on Sunday afternoon (December 22).

Celebrity horses will include 'Lord Alan Shergar' with his catchphrase "You're sired", and 'Pat Butcher' complete with gold earrings, who will be cheered on by some of the cast from EastEnders.

The event is the fourth Annual Royal Greenwich Charity Pantomime Horse

FOLLOW ME:
One of the competitors in last year's race

'FANTASTICALLY BONKERS': The annual pantomime race promises much fun on Saturday

Race, which aims to raise money for the Demelza children's hospice in Eltham.

Singer and television presenter Cheryl Baker, a keen supporter of Demelza, is also due to be there.

It is being organized by Greenwich-based comedy writer Mark Biddis, who says his aim is to "simply put the smile on people's faces, while raising money for such a worthy cause. It's the most fantastically bonkers London Christmas charity race of them all."

All the 'horses' are manufactured by professional costumiers.

Mark has been receiving requests since August from people keen to take part in the race.

It gets under starter's orders at 1pm at Devonport House in King William Walk.

But before that at 11am, horses from The King's Troop, based at Woolwich, will arrive, together with the Greenwich Morris Men, and there will be an appearance on the balcony by a 'lookalike' of Her Majesty The Queen, plus Freddie Mercury and The Beatles tribute acts.

The tributes will also perform at an after-Christmas party at the Greenwich Tavern in King William Walk.

● Tickets are £7 if booked in advance at the bar or via mark@pantohorserace.org or £10 on the door. For more information go to www.pantohorserace.org

Over 40s urged to take up health check

RESIDENTS aged between 40 and 74 are being encouraged to take up their NHS Health Check PLUS when invited.

The check is part of a national scheme to help prevent the onset of heart disease, a stroke, diabetes, kidney disease, dementia and other serious health conditions.

Getting a NHS Health Check PLUS means that these conditions can potentially be identified earlier, which is important for getting the right treatment and making lifestyle changes.

The NHS Health Check PLUS will also provide information and help with making these changes, such as stopping smoking and getting active, which can significantly reduce your chances of developing health problems.

Cllr John Fahy, the royal borough's cabinet member for adults and older people, said: "The royal borough is helping people reduce their risk of developing long-term health problems with NHS Health Check PLUS.

"It offers an option to achieve greater health and wellbeing and reduce their risk of serious diseases."

"I'd urge anyone between 40 and 74 to look out for their invite and take advantage of the scheme."

● If you are within the age range and have not already been diagnosed with one of the conditions above then look out for your invite to a NHS Health Check PLUS appointment, or visit greenwichhealthcheckplus.org.uk

Campaign promotes free flu jabs

PEOPLE in Greenwich at risk from flu are being reminded to protect themselves and their families with a free flu jab.

Anyone aged 65 or over, or who is pregnant or has illnesses such as severe asthma, chest or heart complaints and diabetes are eligible for a free jab.

The royal borough is working with the NHS and local pharmacies to make sure those at most at risk from flu get the free injection.

Now Charlton Athletic is getting behind the campaign and will be promoting flu jab awareness in the upcoming games at The Valley.

These will be against Brighton (December 26) and Sheffield Wednesday (December 29).

Healthwatch Greenwich, a patient representative group in the borough, has also lent its support to the drive for residents to get 'flu safe'.

Flu is a highly contagious infection that anyone can catch, and it can be a really serious illness for some. Even those who had a jab last winter need another one this year to stay flu safe.

Jabs protect in a matter of minutes. People who are carers and frontline health and social care staff are also encouraged to get a free jab to protect themselves and those around them.

Both patients and carers can arrange for vaccinations through their GP or through any local pharmacy.

Anyone who is pregnant and registered with a Greenwich GP can get the jab at their GP or pharmacy.

The involvement of local pharmacies in the vaccination campaign has been given a boost this year through NHS England (London Region) which is supporting over 1100 pharmacies across London to provide free NHS flu vaccinations to at-risk groups this winter.

Cllr John Fahy, the royal borough's cabinet member for health, adults and older people, said: "Flu is not like a cold – it can be a really serious illness for some people. Getting vaccinated with the flu jab is an important way to protect yourself, particularly if you are over 65, or in one of the other at-risk groups."

"We are keen to remind residents at risk of getting flu to get protected with the flu jab this winter there are still a number of people who still need to get vaccinated."

Jabs can be arranged through GPs or pharmacies.

Build careers for the young in construction

by MP

Nick Raynsford

WHILE most coverage of Parliament focuses on high profile debates or Prime Minister's

Questions, much of the most useful work at Westminster goes on quietly behind the scenes, in committees and all party groups.

Here new ideas are developed and proposals tested for meeting a huge range of different needs more effectively. One such group with which I have been involved recently has been looking at how to extend and improve opportunities for unemployed youngsters to get training and work in the construction industry. There is a huge amount of construction work going on in London currently. Here in Greenwich we can see the extent of new building in so many locations, including transport schemes (Crossrail) educational premises, (the University of Greenwich), leisure centres (East Greenwich), shopping complexes (Charlton) and new housing in a variety of locations.

Yet at the same time we still have far too many youngsters leaving school or college without a job to go to, and without the skills to help them find work. Putting the two together to ensure that unemployed young people do get the necessary training and motivation to secure a job and build a career in construction is simple common sense. There are already lots of good initiatives in place. Greenwich Council has for many years required developers to fund training schemes as a condition for securing planning permission, and GLLaB (Greenwich Local Labour and Business) has been working to match local residents with new job opportunities. But much more needs to be done. So I welcome the new University Technical College (UTC) which opened on the Woolwich Road this autumn, specialising in engineering and construction skills for 14 to 19 year olds. And I also applaud moves to encourage building firms to do more training and to take on more apprentices rather than to depend on casual labour and overseas recruitment. These are some of the key issues being examined as part of an inquiry on which I am currently working and which is expected to report early next year. I hope it will give further impetus to the drive to extend opportunities for unemployed youngsters to secure training and employment in construction.

The views expressed are the writer's own and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Royal Borough of Greenwich

Could your child get free meals?

by Dick Townsend-Smith

A CAMPAIGN has been launched to encourage more parents to apply for healthy free school meals for their children.

The royal borough was one of the first local authorities in the country to recognise the importance of a healthy meal in the middle of the day.

Experts agree they improve children's concentration and help keep them active.

Local schools cook nutritious fresh meals every day, using only fresh ingredients. There is a different menu each day, and a choice of main dish. Vegetarian options are available and religious needs can be met.

There is no obligation to have a school meal five days a week. Parents can opt to provide a packed lunch on some days.

Daily meals are free if the child goes to a borough school and his or her family receives one of the following:

- Income Support
- Income-based Jobseeker's Allowance
- Child Tax Credit,

providing you do not receive Working Tax Credit and your annual income is no more than £16,190

- Support under Park Six of the Immigration and Asylum Act 1999
- Income-related Employment and Support Allowance
- Pension Credit Guarantee and Child Tax Credit.

Free meals can save parents between £270 and £340 a year per child. To apply, ask at your school office, or visit www.royalgreenwich.gov.uk/schoolmeals

Cllr Jackie Smith, the royal borough's cabinet member for children's services, said: "We encourage everyone to adopt a healthy lifestyle. The fresh and nutritious food provided in our schools makes an important contribution to this. All parents should consider the benefits of opting for school meals, whether or not they are eligible for a free one."

Leaflets and information about free school meals will be available shortly from libraries, schools, and leisure and children's centres.

Government plans to widen free school meals next September for all under-7s do not affect the existing scheme.

Sports centre proposal for Sutcliffe Park gets thumbs up

A NEW sports centre could be built at Sutcliffe Park to boost existing facilities and offer all weather training for athletes - both able bodied and disabled.

The council agreed to consult on the proposal after earmarking £7.6 million for the project at a meeting last Wednesday. It follows initial discussions with several sport governing bodies who indicated strong support for the scheme.

The council now intends to apply to bodies which fund sporting projects.

The existing facilities at Sutcliffe Park, home of Cambridge Harriers Athletics

Club, are all outdoors.

Subject to planning permission, the idea is to provide indoor facilities including a 60m sprint track and indoor provision for long jump, high jump and throwing events, as well as pole vault.

There would also be classrooms for meetings, a regional boxing centre, programmes for family weight reduction, weights training facilities and two Olympic weightlifting platforms and a gym, a cafe, public toilets and fencing facilities, including for wheelchair users.

Plant a tree info

OUR thanks to Cllr Spencer Drury.

Responding to a letter from Davina and Paul Ramshaw in Greenwich Time (November 19), he has written to say the Plant a Tree in 73 initiative was a national programme introduced to address the loss of millions of elm trees in the 1960s and 1970s from Dutch Elm Disease. At the time trees were placed in various locations throughout the borough by the then borough engineer Aubrey Toogood. It is likely that trees were placed at both Well Hall Pleasaunce and the Tarn. There may still be a plaque commemorating the planting in the Tarn next to the silver birch which was planted there.

Roan revamp mark II

MORE NEW FOUNDATIONS: chair of governors Patrick Cooper, Linda Nelson, chair of The John Roan Foundation, headteacher Des Malone, and Howard Sissons from Wates at the ceremony

A SECOND foundation stone-laying ceremony in less than four months has taken place at The John Roan School.

In September, the ceremony took place for the new building on the Westcombe Park site.

On December 6, a second foundation stone was laid for the refurbished Grade II listed original building on Maze Hill.

The ceremony was performed both times by chair of governors Patrick Cooper, headteacher Des Malone, chair of The John Roan Foundation Linda Nelson and Wates project director Howard Sissons.

John Roan is one of the five secondary schools to be rebuilt or substantially refurbished through the royal borough's Building Schools for the Future programme. Work started in July 2012.

Staff and pupils will be moving back into the refurbished Maze Hill building from September next year, and into the stunning new state-of-the-art building on the Westcombe Park site at the same time.

Years 7, 8 and the 6th Form will be based in Maze Hill so that every Year 7 student can have a 6th Form mentor. Years 9, 10 and 11 will be based at the Westcombe Park site.

Headteacher Mr Malone said: "The alterations to the 1928 building at Maze Hill are stunning. I really didn't believe that a refurbishment could transform a building so dramatically.

"Wates, and the architects John McAslan and Partners, have done an incredible job in retaining period features while bringing the learning environment

Jean genies plan to purify wash day blues

PASSENGERS waiting for the 178 bus on Kidbrooke Park Road near Thomas Tallis School will be able to breathe a little easier thanks to the installation of a pioneering experimental air purifier in the form of 45 pairs of jeans!

The Field of Jeans display was 'planted' on a patch of grass at the front of the school last week as part of a special science/art project with two leading professors.

Artist professor Helen Storey and scientist professor Tony Ryan have created a revolutionary liquid laundry additive called CatClo which reacts with light to purify the air.

Pupils have worked with Helen Storey on several innovative projects to promote creative learning across the curriculum and were keen to get involved in her latest project. The arts professor was due to speak to students and staff about her collaboration with the scientist last Friday ahead of the year-long display outside the school. Headteacher Carolyn Roberts said: "We're very proud to be hosting the Field of Jeans on site. It's a sign that this school is committed to new ideas that could change the world. Our motto is 'Education to understand the world and change it for the better'. The jeans represent the notion that people with different ways of knowing and learning can work together to solve complex problems to make all our lives better. That's exactly the message we want to communicate to our young people."

ELTHAM mum Susan Covington had a bright idea when she wanted to raise money for a men's cancer charity after losing her dad.

For the last three years she's decked the halls and the windows and the roof at her Westhorne Road semi. And the bright lights and decorations have impressed passers by who have donated to Prostate Cancer UK.

Susan switched on the lights again last week for the third year of fundraising for the charity. She told GT: "When my dad went for treatment one of the machines he needed was broken so I decided to try to raise money towards a new one. If one person comes by and says 'I must get checked' then it's worth it."

Susan thanked the local Travis Perkins store who put up the scaffolding for free making it easier for daughters Corinne and Amanda to decorate the house.

She added: "Women get letters telling them to get checks for breast and cervical cancers but men don't tend to be as aware. I have sons and a grandson and want to help raise awareness."

Mark Bishop, director of fundraising at Prostate Cancer UK, said: "We're thrilled that Susan has decided to support Prostate Cancer UK by decorating her house with Christmas lights and raising funds for the charity. It is with support like this that we can help provide dedicated support and information to men and their families affected by prostate cancer and fund research to help fight the disease."

"With over 40,000 men diagnosed with prostate cancer each year in the UK and one man dying every hour, it is our aim to help more men survive the disease and enjoy a better quality of life. A huge thank you and best wishes for the festive season Susan!"

Pupils at Cherry Orchard Primary School were asked to design a Christmas card to be printed and sent out as their corporate Christmas card. The winning designer was seven-year-old Andy Nguyen from Year 3 (pictured right) who created a collage of a Christmas tree. Andy said: "I am really happy my picture was picked. I feel proud and I am really excited everyone will see my picture on the Christmas card". Nigel Pearce, neighbourhood manager for the housing association which manages 1200 homes in the Charlton Triangle Area, said: "All the children who designed a Christmas card for us did an excellent job and choosing one for our card was very difficult. Andy's design was excellent as the shapes he cut out were strong and represent Christmas through a child's eye in a perfect way."

Memories in focus

SCENE

PEOPLE shared their memories triggered by family photos during a special photographic event at Greenwich Heritage Centre last Wednesday (December 11).

They were asked to take along old family snaps as part of a project which helps locals piece together family memories and histories.

The event was organised by photography project Eye4change, which is working with the heritage centre to help young people learn different skills and receive accredited training.

The idea is to produce a multi-media exhibition that will involve the community both now and with future generations.

Young people involved in the project hosted the event and talked to visitors about their favourite family photos. Some date back into the 19th century. The organisers also want to hear about local photographers from the 1800s and early 1900s and find examples of their work.

Visitors who went along included Sandra Inglis from Greenwich, who brought photos of her grandfather Edward Bird in uniform.

She said: "He joined the army in 1907, survived the Great War, and died in 1957. I read about this event in Greenwich Time and thought I would bring my family photos along. I've been able to trace my family back to the 1300s. I've found in census records that I'm related to former Lord Mayors of London – as well as beggars and vagabonds."

Also present was pest controller Alan Parkes from Plumstead, who used to be the keyboards player with 1960s/70s rock band East of Eden. He said: "I didn't bring along any family photos, but ones of the band, because they were like a family to me."

Project organiser Xenia Demetriou said: "The band became Alan's family, and our project involves not just relatives but also extended families like his. The 14-month project will culminate in a three-month exhibition at the Heritage Centre beginning in May."

Lottery Fund, has been lending high-quality digital cameras to local groups for them to record memories of their neighbourhoods.

They will include the historic Progress Estate in Eltham. Originally named the Well Hall Estate, it was built in 1915 to house the many additional workers the Woolwich Arsenal needed to manufacture arms needed by the services during the First World War. Conservation Area status was granted in 1975, in recognition of its unique architectural character.

Avril Martin from the estate's 2015

Group, said: "I am delighted we have contributed to this photographic record of contemporary Royal Greenwich. It brought home to us all how many different architectural styles there are on our estate and the care and attention paid by its designers and builders in 1915. Our images will, in time, form part of its historic record."

A selection of each group's photographs will be on display at the Stephen Lawrence Gallery at the University of Greenwich between January 9 and 24.

Hidden theatre gem in a school

WHAT'S UP DOC? Susannah Best in Comic Potential

JUST to the north of the Plantagenet Palace and to the east of its more illustrious cousin (The Bob Hope Theatre), lies a little known theatre in the heart of a school.

The Tyler Theatre is in the Harris Academy school on Middle Park Avenue. The Roan Theatre Company have played there for two decades or more. And under director Stuart Mitchell-Smith, they have just performed Alan Ayckbourn's play Comic Potential.

But it's not just the Roan troupe with their two shows a year (rehearsals on Mondays and Wednesdays from 7.45 pm - 10pm) who make use of this excellent venue.

It is available for hire to the general public and more often than not to the school's own children during the school day, a marvellous opportunity to build confidence and skills. Mitchell-Smith was effusive: "The sound, the acoustics and the staging are terrific, it's small but it's versatile and its depth is unique."

The demand from the locals tells its own positive story – Comic Potential was a sell-out most nights.

"The feedback was excellent with nothing but praise," said Mitchell-Smith and the actors just "rose to the challenge".

Among their number is someone Mitchell-Smith marks out for a great future. "One of our troupe will outgrow us I fear - Susannah Best's performance was magical," he said.

Ayckbourn's play has been described as Pygmalion meets Blade Runner and Susannah's transition - from naive machine innocence to sensitive human adult - was truly remarkable.

As well as the Roan Theatre Company, the theatre is used by many organisations throughout the year. Other groups making use of the facilities range from operatic groups to the Royal Eltham Scouts who take centre stage for a show at Easter.

● For more details about hiring it contact Graham Johnstone on grahamj4@talktalk.net or call Ella Verrier on 0208 8599201.

Grant means Now's The Time to take up sport

A PROJECT designed to get Thamesmead active has been launched in Greenwich and Bexley thanks to a £240,000 grant from Sport England's Community Sport Activation fund.

The scheme has been developed with the strong support of partners Trust Thamesmead, the Royal Borough of Greenwich and Peabody and Gallions Housing Association. The funds will be put towards a £400,000 three-year project called 'Now's the time...'

It will encourage adults to get involved in new, exciting and affordable activities throughout Thamesmead in a range of traditional and non-traditional settings.

The project is due to start in Spring 2014 and is largely based on consultation with local residents who provided feedback on the type of activities in which they would like to participate.

The project's partners have each invested in the scheme and will be responsible for different parts.

Cllr John Fahy, the royal borough's cabinet member for health adults and older people, said: "It is fantastic news that this funding has been secured for Thamesmead and it will allow us to look at new ways of encouraging residents to get active."

"We want to help remove any barriers that prevent people exercising, because being active has so many health benefits, both in the short and long term."

Staff from the royal borough's Greenwich Get Active team will be at Morrisons in Thamesmead on Thursdays from January 16 to March 13, encouraging local people to get a free New Year Lifestyle Check and take part in sporting activities.

Volunteers will also be needed to act as local champions in promoting the project in their neighbourhood.

In January a mini pilot scheme will also start at Sporting Club Thamesmead aimed at people aged over 25 who currently do little or no exercise but feel they could benefit from being more active.

This will involve a short course of gentle physical activity with close support from health professionals who will monitor participants' progress and provide advice on leading a healthier lifestyle.

● Residents in the royal borough wanting more information can contact the Greenwich Get Active team on freephone number 0800 0965436, text ACTIVE to 60066 or visit www.greenwichgetactive.com.

● Sport England has granted £270,000 of National Lottery funding to the London Youth Games Foundation to stage next year's event. More than 100,000 children competed in 2013 across 30 sports.

the South London Terriers, also picked up an honour. They lead their league by a small margin and will look to cement that at the next tournament in February.

A member of the junior Terriers, Keni Olaoye, was given a Jack Petchey award. Since 1999, the Jack Petchey Foundation has given grants to people recognising extreme endeavour and those who help young people to help themselves.

The Plumstead Manor School pupil, who could not be at the awards ceremony, received funds to spend on equipment for her team, who meet on Tuesdays at the Waterfront after school.

Sharon Brokenshire, director of SLSL, said: "She has been tremendous. She has put herself up to support the other girls and works really hard. She's such a good organiser of the other children."

The youth team finished second bottom of their last tournament and have been given the target of finishing one place better next time. The awards were given out by the royal borough's deputy mayor, Cllr Nick Hayes.

Free collection for real Christmas trees

Royal Greenwich will recycle your real Christmas tree as part of your weekly collection. If you would like us to collect your tree then simply remove all decorations and the pot and place your tree at the front of your property (not in your bin) where it can be easily be seen by the green-top bin collection team.

Your tree will be taken on your normal collection day so make sure it is put out with your bin before 6.00 am. If you don't have a green-top bin you can still leave your tree at the front of your property, there is no need to telephone for a special collection.

Residents living in flats should leave their real trees by the bin store.

Blue-top bin – we know that families are very busy at this time of year but you will probably have a lot more recycling over the holiday period, such as Christmas cards, paper, glass bottles and jars, plastic bottles, cans and cardboard boxes (polystyrene should be removed and placed in black-top bin); please remember to recycle as much as possible. We need all of your good quality clean material. REMEMBER - waxed/coated cartons and paperback books can be placed in your blue-top bin.

Don't forget to order clear recycling bags and cornstarch food waste bags in plenty of time to guarantee delivery before Christmas.

If you are not already recycling then telephone the Council's Contact Centre on 020 8921 4661 to order your blue-top bin.

Green-top bin – leftover food waste should be placed in your green-top bin. Please remember no plastic packaging can be placed in this bin as the content will be composted.
